BJA Second Chance Act planning	currently no data exchange between the Judicial System and Reliatrax.
	Ms. Smith also found out that Reliatrax has contracts with a number of Action:	domestic violence providers around the state. Reliatrax agreed to share the Reliatrax system should provide information about the number of people in treatment, the duration of treatment, treatment compliance, termination from treatment, and so on. It was noted that some municipal courts decide domestic violence cases.

	In 2015, Colorado was one of 7 states awarded a BJA Second Chance Act planning grant to study the feasibility of a health exchange and criminal justice network. Peggy Heil from DCJ recently submitted the application for the next step, an implementation grant, to receive technical assistance to implement an information sharing system. Ms. Smith informed the group that Colorado was not awarded the implementation grant but that the planning group intends to continue to pursue the efforts underway. Ms. Smith asked the Task Force if there would be interest in a crossover meeting with the members of the BJA Second Chance Act Planning grant group. The group agreed and Ms. Smith will reach out to Ms. Heil.
	Mr. Zarrin mentioned a Data-Driven Justice Initiative (DDJ) launched by the White House. DDJ is a free data tool developed for people with serious mental illness. Could this tool be a viable option in the data sharing efforts?
	Ms. Smith responded that considering the privacy issues related to mental health and the existing groups currently working on these issues, this task force chose to first focus on the integration of municipal court data but is documenting this option.
